Exploring Communication through Reflective Practice

Not sure if this opportunity is for you?

Join in with colleagues who have embraced this learning opportunity for a day of examining the processes needed to step back and reflect. We will explore:

- How an ongoing learning process is key to the implementation of the Early Years Learning Framework within your service
- How communication through reflective practice prepares the educators in your team for permanent supported change
- The roles and support offered by the facilitator, mentor and PSCQ during the journey

Susan Cary will link the Early Years Learning Framework with the Action Research process – the art of examining the everyday practice issues to develop solutions for action. Karyn Johns will explore “Communication” in its broadest sense and pose questions to stimulate greater exploration within the practice context.

with Susan Cary & Karyn Johns

Karyn Johns has worked for 12 years in the community, early childhood centres and schools. Her work as a Speech Language Pathologist has included supporting families, professionals and agencies to ensure children reach their potential as well as educating others in effective communication techniques. Karyn is committed to developing partnership approaches to learning and service development – she is chair of the GR8 START advisory group and member of the Early Language Initiative. She is committed to her own personal professional development and looks forward to the challenges and successes ahead with the PSCQ Action Research project.

Susan Cary is a passionate advocate for young children, having worked within the Early Years and Childcare sector for over 20 years in Queensland and the UK. She has developed many strategies and programs to support practitioners in deepening their reflective processes connecting theory and practice. She has delivered at numerous national UK conferences as well as internationally in Malta, Ireland and Iceland. Susan was awarded a distinction for her Masters in Early Childhood Studies from the Froebel Institute at Roehampton University, Surrey in 2007.
