

How Do We Develop a Sense of Belonging for All People?

Hillary Rodham Clinton wrote about the notion of a "Village raising the child," a concept that comes from Kenya, but is common around the world in many cultures. She spoke about the shared responsibility we all have in raising and nurturing children and their families so that the opportunities for success come from sharing ideas and parenting across the community.

Saturday 17 July 2010
9.00am—4.00pm

University of the Sunshine Coast
Auditorium at the Innovation Centre
Sippy Downs Drive
Sippy Downs

This workshop explores how one children's service has connected across the broader community, how it connects with families, other agencies, other early childhood services, schools and communities. It looks at it through its vision, mission statement and values and how these are articulated into practice through the EYLF.

This is more than just an early childhood service, this is about a deep connectedness to families beyond the early childhood service, through schools, community partnerships and the arts.

Learning outcomes include:

- Understanding of what the key understandings of highly accomplished teachers and leaders.
- Qualities that build community connectedness
- How the Early Years Learning Framework supports communities of learners.
