TURNING THEORY INTO PRACTICE FOR INDIVIDUAL CHILDREN

In these SNAP Sessions participants get a chance to learn about some of the theories related to what might be impacting on individual children, and how to turn these into practice that can get results.

We will look at child development but also what this means 'on the ground' with children and what else might be happening.

We can often talk about actual issues as well. Participants can discuss (with due confidentiality) actual issues that come up day to day for them and we will workshop them 'live'.

Outcomes include:

- An Understanding of theoretically informed practice
- An awareness of contextual realities for children and young people
- An understanding of different approaches and tools used in practice
- Networking and peer learning opportunities
