What does it mean to the child to be in the space they are in?
How does this impact on their behaviour?

Children make sense of their environment in very particular ways and this will play out in their behaviours and interactions with others.

In this session we will explore what this looks like and how to be aware of this in the workplace and with the children.

Outcomes include:

- An Understanding of theoretically informed practice
- An awareness of contextual realities for children and young people
- An understanding of different approaches and tools used in practice
- Basic introduction to issues including trauma in children

WITH PETER MELROSE

Peter Melrose runs a private practice with clients throughout Queensland and Victoria and has worked in the child and family welfare sector since 1989. He has held senior positions in both Government and Non-government organisations across a number of jurisdictions and states. Peter is a regular speaker at national and international child and family welfare and child protection conferences, and has written a number of journal articles on topics ranging from child and family therapeutic approaches, through to working respectfully with clients and children and young people in care.
