Nature & Nurture, Cognition & Emotions: The Importance of Early Experience

Participants will learn more about the principles of brain development that inform and guide their practice. We will explore the development of children's attachment, socialisation, social cognition, moral development, personality development and cognitive development. We will intentionally align our practices with contemporary models of child development.

WITH DR MARGIE CARTER

Dr Margaret-Anne Carter works successfully in a range of positions in care and education settings across Australia. She is recognised in this field as an exemplary educator, creating inclusive teaching and learning environments. Margie regularly presents at conferences, facilitates professional learning sessions, and publishes in scholarly journals. Margie is noted as the designer of high quality, up to date professional development resource and curriculum material in areas including child social emotional behaviour, children with complex needs, parenting, and self care.

This event is a series. All sessions link together to understand child development. Not all sessions need to be attended though participants are encouraged to attend all the sessions to support their understanding child development
